MAY 2019

Pilgrim Pulse Volume 11 Issue 5

The Good News . . .

As you read this, events like Easter Sunday and the tragic fire that burned Notre Dame in Paris, France will be past events. As I write this to you, however, they are the not yet or present reality for me. Time and how it relates to us is a curious thing. The season of Lent is past, but hopefully its lessons are still present with us. The joy of Resurrection Sunday is a not yet anticipation for me, but it is a warm recent memory for you. As time stretches out before us and behind us, so too does the road of our pilgrimage toward Christ. Most moments pass by us, barely noticed, like a stream in the river, or like the Parisian pigeons roosting on the spire of Notre Dame or flying away to some other nearby building, not caring whether it is historic or modern. But there are moments along this pilgrimage of ours that sort of stick in our minds, living as ever-present experiences that linger and shape us. Moments like the resurrection on Easter, or the graduations that are fast approaching us. There are places and spaces that are like that for us too.

While I have never been to Paris myself and I have never stepped foot beneath those beautiful vaulted ceilings of Notre Dame Cathedral, I found myself unable to resist weeping as I watched the video of the fire and the spire collapsing. The images of tragic destruction stopped my breath short and broke my heart. You see, Notre Dame isn't just a church. It's an historic monument to the enduring nature of our faith and a celebration of the beautiful creativity that humanity can achieve. It is a bastion of beauty and peace in a world that is often ugly and chaotic. Honestly, there is nothing in our own country that can begin to compare to the significance of what was lost in that fire. Notre Dame is more than 850 years old and has survived the ravages of two world wars. It took almost two centuries to build. Our own country is only two and a half centuries old. How can we even begin to measure the significance and worth of something like this? And yet there is a connection.

Our own church is the second oldest church in Greenville; surpassed only by First United Methodist Church. It is an historic building; having been dedicated in June of 1880. Its beautiful design was created by E. E. Myers; the same architect who designed our Michigan State Capitol. It is a profound privilege to be the present stewards and caretakers of such a beautiful edifice. I sense that it too represents the solid longevity and faithfulness of the church in our area too. So it was natural, that as I watched the spire of Notre Dame collapse in flames, I thought of our own beautiful white steeple stretching above the Greenville skyline. As I feared for the beautiful rose windows in that great historic cathedral, I thought of our own beautiful rose window. As we all held our breath to hear what caused this great fire, I wondered if we here were being faithful in caring for what has been handed down to us.

The church, and our congregation, is so much more than just a building. We recently pondered how Scripture calls us the living stones in a new temple. And yet our church building is such a significant part of who we are, how we are recognized, how people find us, and the peace and joy that people feel gathering here. I pray that we are and will be worthy heirs of this place, as well as the faith, that has been so diligently passed on to us. May it be a joy for us to pass on to our children.

*Peace of Christ,
Rev. Jason Dillingham*
